

A word of Head of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology Nursing - Benha University

The Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology Nursing at the Faculty of Nursing, Benha University plays a vital and important role in graduating specialized and qualified nurses to provide comprehensive health care for women, mothers and newborns. The department works to provide advanced and integrated educational programs that cover all aspects of nursing related to this sensitive and specialized field. The department aims to develop students' skills in areas such as diagnosis, treatment, prevention, and counseling for women and mothers. Theoretical concepts and practical applications are taught in interactive and innovative ways, helping students understand the biological and medical processes associated with obstetrics and gynecology and how to deal with them efficiently and professionally. With a commitment to the highest quality standards of nursing care and attention to detail to ensure the safety and comfort of women. In addition to academic education, the department provides practicum opportunities in accredited hospitals, where students are exposed to the actual practical environment and apply the knowledge and skills they have acquired. This practical training helps students build their confidence and enhance practical abilities before entering the labor market. In addition, the department contributes to scientific research and continuous professional development, which helps update nursing practices and ensure the provision of health care based on scientific evidence. The department also encourages faculty members, assistants, and students to participate in conferences and seminars and publish scientific research, which contributes to improving the quality of health care provided to women, mothers, and newborns. The department also contributes to raising community awareness of the importance of reproductive health and women's general health, which leads to enhancing disease prevention and improving the quality of life for women and families in general.
